Question 2

Correct

Mark 3.00 out of 3.00

Read the text about only Children and place the headings in the corresponding part. There are two extra headings.

The only child.

Successful in school ✓ Similar to first-born children, you tend to do well at school because you are used to interacting with adults and can express yourself clearly.

Also, for the reason that you don't have any siblings, you're less likely to have suffered from anxious or jealous feelings that frequently interfere with concentration and memory.

Self-confident ✓ You're very often showered with love and approval. Consequently, you probably are not an insecure person. On the other hand, if your mother and father focused too much attention on you, then you may have felt over-protected and trapped, as though you were living for them rather than for yourself.

In my own clinical experience, though, most parents of singles seem to provide the balance right and raise confident, assertive individuals.

Happy alone ✓ Unlike children with siblings, you're used to finding ways of entertaining yourself. This can be a great plus, because you're less prone than others to feel anxious if no one's around.

Tidy and clean

Your answer is correct.

The correct answer is:

Question 3

Correct

Mark 3.00 out of 3.00

Read the text about only children and place the headings in the corresponding part. There are two extra headings.

Logical and organised ✓ Unlike children, most grown-ups know when it's advisable to repress their emotions and behave rationally. Having grown up around adults, you learned this lesson early. Your sensible, unemotional problem-solving skills were likely, therefore, to develop powerfully.

You're probably good at planning ahead, making lists and organizing yourself and so you're also very often asked to take on positions of responsibility because of this.

Not street-smart ✓ Although parents of single children usually make enormous efforts to provide their child with opportunities to socialize with their peers, these sessions are likely to be planned, time-limited and supervised by adults.

Singles often miss out entirely on opportunities to develop skills to handle bad situations in their informal surroundings. Whereas children with siblings learn to speed-read other people's desires and intended actions (and to take advantage of that knowledge).

You can also feel distanced from your peers and awkward when you try to join in group activities.

Afraid of disorder ✓ In larger families, someone's always knocking over someone else's carefully arranged set of blocks, so siblings have plenty of opportunities to figure out what to do when things go wrong and then mediate among themselves.

That wasn't the case for you. When you had a problem, there was usually an adult on hand to help you to sort it out.

So you probably grew up with little experience of how to cope with confusion.

Therefore, you can appear to be impatient or demanding when things don't go according to your plan.

Sociable and talkative

Your answer is correct.

Your best friend won a scholarship to study English in England for a year. Write him/her an email in which you:

- Congratulate him/her for the prize.

Hi Dear, this is Laura.

I knew that you won the scholarship to study in England and it makes me so happy, you are so smart and I know you are going to be able to survive in England jjaja, just kidding.

You really deserved that scholarship because you always were studying hard to win it.

Your biggest dream is going to be real and that's incredible, I wish you the best in this new experience.

I hope you enjoy this time studying in England, I am going to give you some advice:

1. meet people, you know it's so important to survive in a foreign country.
2. try to rest when you don't have things to do, go out and know the city.
3. try to learn a lot of things in your english classes (when you come back you can learn me)

Please, don't forget me. I'll always call you because I want to know everything, you know I would like to go there too.

As I told you, I wish you the best in this year and I hope see you soon.

You know I love you

(please, send me a postcard when you arrive in london)

Comment:

She did well

A local magazine organized a contest with great prizes. Write a short article with the title: Young people and technology.

Young People and technology.

nowadays is pretty common to find smart houses and a lot of technological devices and we can't deny.

this is a new part of our lifes, the new generations are growing up among one of the biggest technological revolutions through our existence.

it is a fact, that we are sharing our lives with technology but it also can be a problem and we can see it easily, the vast majority of children already have a technological device in their hands, that isn't wrong.

the real problem is that they spend hours and hours watching videos or playing on line and now, they don't enjoy playing in the park with other children.

it also happen with young adults, they spend a lot of time in social media. When we spend all our time in these activities we're prone to suffer with mental disorders like depression or anxiety.

we must return to our real life and try to improve our health, doing exercise, reading a book, going out and meeting real people.

we can't forget that we live around people and we can learn a lot if we share with them.

Technology is an important part of our lives, but not the most.

keep it in mind and enjoy that we still can share time with real people.

Comment: She has wonderful ideas to express and share. However, she needs to be careful with the spelling of some words, the usage of capital letters and some grammar structures.
